The Great Rehearsal

Musicians have been rehearsing music for this week since March. Every season/day we celebrate in our liturgies comes early for musicians and other preparers. It's important, as doing so takes the stress out of the celebration. We know what to do, we know where we're going, and how to get there.

I think of Holy Week as a great rehearsal for all of us.

First off, it's interesting to ponder the word "rehearsal," or perhaps "re-hear." To hear it again. It may be odd to over-think this because we know how the story ends. It's not that we act surprised with the women at the empty tomb - "Oh, wow! The tomb is empty! He really did as he said!!" We know that part. But we do need to hear it over, and over, and over again.

So: For what might we be "rehearsing?"

One thing became clear to several of us this past year as we went through hospice and ensuing death with a loved one. That was one important context for which we've been rehearsing all our lives. We knew what to do, we knew where it was going. We were prepared. Or at least better prepared than if we had not rehearsed.

In the final stanza of “O Sacred Head Now Wounded” (ELW 351, also known as “The Passion Chorale”) we sing, “Lord, be my consolation; shield me when I must die; remind me of thy passion when my last hour draws nigh. These eyes, new faith receiving, from thee shall never move; for all who die ... die safely in thy love.” We sang it last Sunday and will sing it again on Good Friday.

For me this stanza and its meaning was a great anchor during Susan’s hospice – remembering the passion of Jesus on the cross. We had rehearsed it all our lives and Susan had often written about it. “It” would be the Jesus story: God came to live among us. God took on the frail but beautiful body in which we live on this earth; fully human. These bodies made up of the substance of the earth are susceptible to disease, injury, decay – amazing healing, but eventually do die. Sometimes the dying process is a horrible one. But Jesus kept saying “Yeah, that body dying thing – I know – but don’t worry about it and what happens after. The soul will live on and you won’t need the body anymore to do so. I’ll be with you the whole time, and . . . today (or whenever) you will be with me in paradise. Here – I’ll demonstrate.”

The passion story is without a doubt a more horrific and violent example of the end of a human body’s life – but as Jesus demonstrates, is not the end. We do not need to fear what happens. Jesus is even accused by authorities and put to death without a solid verdict of a crime. But yet he lives on in a glory larger than any of the accusing authorities.

That’s what we need to rehearse. To “re-hear” – year after year after year. Indeed, Jesus – remind us of your passion when our last hour is nigh. Help us to not be paralyzed by fear – the life we have is greater than any of the earthly limits and death cannot even take that away from us. Free us to be better compassionate people. Maybe with enough rehearsing, we’ll finally get it. God is with us. We do not need to be afraid.

Neighborhood Ministries Partners of the Month: Powderhorn Park Neighborhood Association and Lake Street Council

April is another month where we have chosen to feature two organizations with connected and related missions.

The Powderhorn Park Neighborhood Association works to enhance the lives of residents in our neighborhood through special events like the Powderhorn Park Art Fair. In addition, they communicate with and advocate for neighborhood residents on issues like housing, economic equity, safety, and security. The Powderhorn Park neighborhood is bordered by Lake Street on the north, Chicago Avenue on the west, 38th Street on the south, and Cedar Avenue on the east, putting Mount Olive right in the northwest corner of our neighborhood home.

The Lake Street Council serves and advocates for the Lake Street business community, working to ensure diversity and prosperity for all businesses, small and large, operating in the corridor. They do this through community events, clean energy retrofit projects, strategic planning, employee recruitment, and more. They have been and continue to be instrumental in helping businesses recover from the effects of the pandemic and the 2020 civil unrest.

Observations by Connie Marty

“We were signed up to take the family grocery shopping. When I arrived, there were 5 mentors there, busy with the children and installing new blinds. I peeked in the fridge and it was jam packed with food.

During lunch we saw photos of family members left behind and they asked us about our families.... The mother took my hand as we sat together and said ‘You are my American mama.’ My heart melted.

Note: The family has relatives here in the U.S. who have also had to flee the Taliban. However, they are very sad and concerned for the ones left behind. One family member lives in a Minneapolis suburb, but to visit him requires a 90-minute bus ride each way.

Diaper Depot Update

This week, we mark the one year anniversary of the launch of our new Diaper Depot delivery model! And with that anniversary, we also find ourselves celebrating the growth of that program. We are serving more and more families with this important service. With that growth comes the need for more delivery drivers. Would you consider joining us in this work?

Currently, there are four of us driving diaper delivery routes. Ideally, I would like to add 2 or 3 more delivery drivers to our diaper depot program. This would lighten the load on our current drivers and allow us to better serve those in our community. Our existing drivers pick up diapers at Mount Olive and then deliver in neighborhoods close to where they live - offering them the opportunity to connect with families in their communities. We can use drivers in any part of the metro area, but in particular, we would like to add at least driver in the south suburbs (Bloomington, Richfield, Burnsville) and another one or two in the north-northeast suburbs (Fridley, Columbia Heights, New Brighton, Brooklyn Park, Brooklyn Center).

Currently, we deliver diapers on Wednesday afternoons, but there is some flexibility in that schedule. Please email me at neighborhood@mountolivechurch.org if you are interested in joining us in this powerful and unique program.
